SEDALIA, Mo., June 4. George Burnham a young silrond of an and his wife, They came here a year ago from Illinois, and Burnham secured employment on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas road. Recently they went to housekeeping, and on last Wednesday the husband was informed that his wife was unfaithful. He kept watch on her movements, and on Friday night, when she supposed he was out on the road, he saw a strange man leave his house. Hastening home, he accused his wife of infidelity, but she denied it emphatic-

The husband, angered by her denial, bound and gagged the woman and drew a knife from his pocket, threatening to cut her throat if she struggled or attempted to cry out. Thoroughly frightened, she was compelled to submit in silence to the binding and tor ture that followed. "After having seated her in a chair, with her hands secure ly bound, he placed her feet through the rungs of another chair, and tying them there, he lit one match after another and scorched the woman's flesh until, in an agony of pain, she signified by signs - being tightly bound and gagged-that she would confess. She was unloosed, and then told her husband the story of her unfaithfulness naming a number of men with whom she acknowledged having been intimate.
